This workshop is designed to improve the ASL proficiencies of interpreters working with Deaf students in the K-12 educational setting. It provides participants strategies and skill building to interpret physical science in and through ASL. Participants will enhance their ASL skills for the purpose of conveying technical concepts to Deaf students accurately. Topics include ASL delivery strategies, assessment modifications, and vocabulary/phrases/topic contexts for effective language delivery.

Christopher Kurz, PhD, is a Deaf associate professor and director of the DEAF Mathematics and Science Language and Learning Lab (DMS-L3) of NTID. He has developed ASL-based educational media materials for K-16 teachers of the deaf and educational interpreters.
